Quick and concise review: a relaxing jigsaw game with a twist. the backgrounds are actually animated so it adds an extra layer of depth and challenge. Getting the 350 pieces jigsaws done is not an easy task.

The ability to separated edge of inner pieces in two piles is very welcomed, as is the "magnetizing" or snap if you manage to place a piece in the correct spot. It all helps conveying a sense of relaxation while still giving you the challenge of assembling several hundred-pieces puzzles.

The game also saves your progress so you can leave to take a rest and come back later to continue. That's a very good feature that I recall few other puzzlers didn't have, forcing you to do them in one sitting. Not so much here, as such it's a perfect game to switch to in between work!

On the technical side of course the game runs quite fine on moderate spec PCs (tried it in a laptop with an integrated Intel HD card and results weren't as good however) so no issues there. It's mouse operated but with Steam controller config you can certainly setup a controller to play as well, but I don't recommend it on the smaller pieces puzzles. You need the up close and personal approach.

All in all quite recommended and I'm definitely considering taking a look at the rest of the developer offerings in this field, they are great distractions in busy days and have achievements to track your progress too, as well as trading cards. Considering how many hours I clocked without realizing, I would say buy it even at full price. At sale price it's a no brainer!
